For those who haven't found it yet, I uploaded my table of weapons to Google Docs and made it available on the wiki at Dr. Bullet's suggestion. It's located on the Weapons and Items page.

I'm slowly updating it for Build 4452. I added a column showing the build number for each weapon, so you can see which ones have been updated and which ones haven't. I also have/will have data on armor as well.

Constructive comments and questions can be posted here.

See my table. Got it from an eternalized file at H:\Program Files (x86)\TalonSoft\Ja2\Data-1.13\TableData\weapons.xml:
https://docs.google.com/spreadsheet/ccc?key=0An\_wa-tQ1pR3dF9pMXZGQTNqcnFDLVpIZ2JoTWF2V2c&hl=en\_US#gid=0
Sort it how you want to find the weapons with the most ideal stats for your needs.

About the table, I assume that the yellow rows are the best for the category group. Am I right?

sidewAbout the table, I assume that the yellow rows are the best for the category group. Am I right?

The yellow rows are not necessarily the very best, but they are worth noting. For example, there are more damaging melee weapons than the SOG Seal 2000, but it's the best one that will fit in a pocket, so I felt it deserved special attention. Likewise, for some things I highlighted a weapon multiple weapons in the same category, each for a different reason. 9x19mm is great for loot-ability, so I have those, but for more oomph there are the .40 S&Ws, etc. For the SMGs I had a whole bunch highlighted because a lot of them are good for different situations, but I had so many highlighted that it became useless. So, don't neglect to look at the stats yourself.
